Personal Information

The BPLF collects email addresses when you subscribe to the library's e-newsletter All Things Library. The BPLF does not sell or rent this information with third parties. In order to increase support for the library and keep costs low, we may on rare occasion exchange email addresses with other carefully selected non-profits. Subscribers are given the opportunity to remove your name from our email list at the bottom of each e-newsletter.

BPLF collects donor name and address information in connection with contributions. We do not rent or sell donor information to third parties. In order to increase support for the library and to keep our costs low, the BPLF sometimes exchanges a segment of our mailing list with other carefully selected non-profits. Donors who wish to have their name removed from the exchange list can call 510-981-6115 or email info@bplf.org.

Online Donation Security

Your online donations are safe and secure. The BPLF uses industry-standard SSL (Secure Sockets Layer) encryption to protect the confidentiality of your personal information and the security of your transaction.
